THE MINERS ARE FIRM.

No Move Made by Any of Them Toward a Resumption of Work.

President Mitchell Denies a Widely Circulated Story to the Effect That He Reached an Agreement With the Operators.

Hazleton, Pa., Oct. 4.—Another day has come and gone without developing anything new in the strike of the anthracite coal miners of Pennsylvania. Although most of the big companies have offered mine workers ten per cent. increase in wages, not a move has yet been made by any of the strikers towards a resumption of work. The way the men have thus far stood together without showing any weakness in any part of the ranks is considered remarkable by many persons in this region. That a break will come sooner or later, however, is believed by many to be certain. It is pointed out that as the strikers' funds grow smaller their hope will become fainter and they will accept the ten per cent. offered by the companies.

But against this argument is that of the labor leaders who stoutly maintain, as they did before the increase was offered, that the men will stand fast like so many rocks against what they term unsatisfactory concession on the part of the operators.

Though President Mitchell and his colleagues say they are sanguine of their ability to keep the almost general tie up in force until the operators further recede from their position, they are not losing an opportunity to keep the men from being influenced into resuming work by rumors of settlements, agreements, etc.

Wednesday President Mitchell was informed of the wide circulation of a story to the effect that he had reached an agreement with the presidents of the coal mining and coal carrying railroads and after verbally denying the report he issued the following:

To the Miners and Mine Workers of the Anthracite Region:

"We have just been informed that the report has been circulated at Hazleton to the effect that in a conference in New York this morning between the coal presidents and myself an agreement was reached which will end the strike.

"I desire to notify all mine workers that the report is incorrect and that I have not been in conference with the presidents of the coal companies and have no agreement with them. I wish to reiterate what I said several days ago that there would be no settlement of the strike until a convention of the anthracite miners is held. You are further requested to pay no attention to statements of this kind and to continue the strike until such concessions are made by the operators as will justify us in calling a general convention, when you will be regularly notified of the date and place at which the convention will be held."

Shenandoah, Pa., Oct. 4.—The only important development in the strike situation in this district Wednesday was the posting of notices by the Philadelphia & Reading Coal and Iron Co. at all of its collieries and in conspicuous places in the towns and mining "patches," announcing a net increase of ten per cent. in wages and a willingness to hear the grievances of its employees.

The local and district organizers were on the alert and in less than five minutes after the company's proposal had been placarded a warning to the mine workers was circulated.

In this town and vicinity Organizer C. S. Pottier distributed circulars printed in the English, Polish and Lithuanian languages, calling on the strikers to pay no attention to the company's offer, but to wait for the decision of the mine workers' convention. The impression here Wednesday night is that none of the strikers will attempt to return to work until so ordered by President Mitchell.

There are no indications of trouble in the Pan Creek valley.

Gen. Gobin has been informed that a big meeting of mine workers will be held at Lansford Thursday night. A large number of Hazleton strikers are expected to attend.

Gen. Gobin says he will be ready if troops are needed.

The 8th regiment was Wednesday night making preparations to break camp. Gen. Gobin late Wednesday night ordered the regiment to start for home Thursday. Company I, of the 12th, left Wednesday.

Maj. Parquhar, provost marshal, has ordered the guard to diligently patrol the eastern sections of the borough, near Indian Ridge colliery. He says the strikers there are showing an ugly disposition.

Wilkesbarre, Pa., Oct. 3.—The parade and mass meeting of the striking miners in this city Tuesday was the greatest labor demonstration ever held in Northwestern Pennsylvania. Fully 15,000 miners were in line.

Elliott Defeats Gilbert.

CENSUS OF ARKANSAS.

The Population in 1900 Is 1,311,564, as Against 1,128,179 in 1890, an Increase of 183,385.

Washington, Oct. 4.—The census bureau Wednesday published the returns for the state of Arkansas, giving the population by counties, townships and all incorporated towns.

The population of the state in 1900 is 1,311,564, as against 1,128,179 in 1890, representing an increase since 1890 of 183,385, or 16.25 per cent. This rate of increase is only about two-fifths of that of the decade from 1880 to 1890, when it was 40.58 per cent., and less than one-fourth of that for the decade from 1870 to 1880, when it was 65.65 per cent. From 1860 to 1870 there was an increase of only 11.25 per cent., but prior to 1860 the population more than doubled itself during each decade, and for the decade from 1830 to 1840 showed an increase of 221.09 per cent.

The population of Arkansas in 1900 is more than 90 times as large as the population given for 1820, the first census taken after its organization as a territory in 1819.

The total land surface of Arkansas is, approximately, 53,045 square miles, the average number of persons to the square mile at the censuses of 1890 and 1900 being as follows: 1890, 21.27; 1900, 24.73.

THE VATICAN ROBBERY.

Four Persons Are Under Suspicion, and One Was Arrested By the Italian Police.

Rome, Oct. 4.—The Italian police have begun investigation into the burglary at the vatican, where thieves the other day forced a safe and carried off securities worth 357,000 lire and 3,000 lire in silver, although the vatican officials have not lodged a formal complaint, contenting themselves with merely announcing the theft. Four persons are under suspicion and one was arrested Wednesday morning. The Tribuna says that the Italian police warned the vatican police in July of last year that a plan was on foot to commit some such robbery. It is believed that the stolen property does not belong, as was originally asserted, to the management of the apostolic palace, but is a part of the private funds of the pope.

FROM THE KLONDIKE.

The Steamship City of Seattle Arrives With $1,500,000 in Treasure and 317 Passengers.

Seattle, Wash., Oct. 4.—The steamship City of Seattle arrived Wednesday from Skagway with $1,500,000 in Klondike treasure and 317 passengers. Of the treasure $500,000 was consigned from the Bank of British North America of Dawson. Another $500,000 came from the Canadian Bank of Commerce, consigned to the local assayer's office.

There was a single shipment of $44,000 in dust from the Atlin district. It is said that at least $500,000 will come from that district on the next few boats.

On September 29, when the Seattle left Skagway, the Yukon river was still open and there had been no snow either on the summit or along the trail. The river will be open two weeks or longer.

A Shipwrecked Crew.

Boston, Oct. 4.—The British steamer Amana, Capt. Carr, from Samarang, Java, via St. Michaels, arrived Wednesday afternoon having on board the captain and 13 of the crew of the Liverpool ship Elerslie, which was abandoned at sea, dismantled and waterlogged. The steamer rescued the men on September 29 after they had been buffeted about by fearful seas for ten days.

Used Liquid Fuel.

London, Oct. 4.—The steamship Cowrie steamed from Koetli, Borneo, to London, 9,250 miles, with liquid fuel. This was reduced to a spray by a jet at the furnace door. The owners say that the substitution of coal by a liquid proves most advantageous. Six stokers sufficed instead of 16. Twenty-two tons of oil were consumed daily on the voyage, as against 35 tons of coal on former voyages.

In Prison for Debt.

Chicago, Oct. 4.—Mrs. Clara B. Keator, arrested for refusing to pay a bill of $20,000 last April, contracted with Hyman Berg & Co., jewelers, has broken all records for imprisonment for debtors at the county jail. She has been behind the bars almost six months. This exceeds the stay of any previously imprisoned debtors by three months.

Murdered By Boxers.

Milford, Neb., Oct. 4.—News of the death of Mrs. Alice Troyer Young and her husband, who were murdered near Peking, China, by the Boxers on July 16, has been received by her parents. Mr. and Mrs. John Troyer, of this place. Five years ago Miss Troyer entered the missionary work in China. About a year ago she married Mr. Young, also a missionary.

Adm. Kempf Denies It.

Washington, Oct. 4.—Adm. Kempf, in a cable, denies the published reports to the effect that the gunboat Villalobos was captured at Marinduque by the insurgents when Capt. Shields and his company of the 29th United States volunteer infantry were captured.

More Bodies Recovered.

Galveston, Tex., Oct. 4.—Twenty-one bodies were recovered from the debris Wednesday, making a total of 2,396 officially reported as recovered since the storm.

SHANG-HAI-KUAN FALLS

By Request of Von Waldersee the Forts Were Seized by the Allies.

Viceroy of Kang Suh and Szechuan Promised to Have Missionaries Safely Escorted From Min-Chou to Chungking.

Washington, Oct. 3.—Favorable news has reached Washington from the European chancelleries indicating that a complete agreement as to China is in sight. The agreement will be on the basis of the proposition laid down by Secretary Hay in the note of July 3 and the subsequent notes treating of that subject. The accord of Russia with the United States is more complete than was anticipated at first, and the reports show that all of the European nations probably are placing themselves in position to take advantage of the opening made by the United States and soon will be ready to begin negotiations for a settlement with the Chinese government. The Russians already have given notice of such purpose, and while the text of the French note on this subject, referred to in Tuesday's press dispatches, has not reached the state department, the officials are satisfied that this is correctly reported and that France, like Russia, is ready to negotiate at once.

As for Germany, either the position of that government has been misunderstood or it has sustained a change of mind. Possibly the former is the case, but, however that may be, it is quite certain that the advances which have reached Washington Tuesday that the German government, upon careful inspection of plans for a settlement projected by the United States, finds therein nothing consistent with the German aspirations. Therefore, it may be expected that Germany too will be prepared soon to join in this combination movement towards a settlement. It may be stated that altogether the prospects of an adjustment of the Chinese difficulty without resort to formal war are very much brighter than they were one week ago.

The news developments of the day were few, being confined to a cablegram from Mr. Conger reciting the departure of the Russian minister and suite from Peking, and an authentication by Mr. Wu of the edict providing for the punishment of Tuan and the guilty princes.

The reply of Great Britain to Germany's proposal is expected very soon, and the belief is still held here that it will be favorable.

Vienna, Oct. 4.—The admiralty has received the following dispatch from Taku:

"In accordance with the request of Count von Waldersee, the seizure of Shang-Hai-Kuan was decided upon by a council of the admirals September 29, and all was prepared for action. English ships were sent to demand its surrender, and the Chinese evacuated the place. The British then hoisted their flag, and the other flagships thereupon went thither and put up their respective flags on the forts."

Washington, Oct. 4.—The department of state has received a dispatch from Consul General Goodnow, at Shanghai, dated August 25, 1900, from which it appears that, at the request of the consul general, the viceroys of Kang Suh and Szechuan have promised to do everything in their power to have the following missionaries, belonging to the Christian and missionary alliances, safely escorted from Min Chou (in Kang Suh) to Chungking: Martin Erik Ekvall, David P. Ekvall, Helen P. Ekvall, R. B. Ekvall, W. Ruhl, C. F. Snyder, W. W. Simpson, O. E. Simpson and M. H. Simpson.

St. Petersburg, Oct. 4.—The Russian general staff has received a dispatch dealing with the operations north of Old Niu Chwang, which says that Gen. Fleischer's division of 6,000 men, with artillery, engaged the Chinese on a vast plain covered with high grass. The Russians lost two officers killed and 18 men wounded.

According to the same advice, Col. Artamanoff, while reconnoitering with two squadrons of cavalry, came into touch with 14,000 disciplined Chinese. These Gen. Fleischer is expected to engage.

Washington, Oct. 4.—The state department has been making some inquiries as to the extent to which Jung Lu, one of the peace negotiators appointed by the emperor, participated in the Boxer troubles. It is believed that these inquiries have at least developed something unfavorable to the acceptance of Jung Lu, whose tendencies have been anti-foreign, as a satisfactory person with whom to conduct negotiations. A rather guarded statement is made that this government has not "formally objected" to Jung Lu's appointment, leaving the inference to be drawn that its preference is against him being so honored.

Treasury Statement.

Washington, Oct. 3.—Tuesday's statement of the treasury balances in the general fund, exclusive of the $150,000,000 gold reserve in the division of redemption, shows: Available cash balance, $136,297,017; gold, $83,301,486.

Drafted By the Cincinnati Club.

Utica, N. Y., Oct. 3.—John K. Dobbs, of Chattanooga, Tenn., who was the center fielder of the Utica State league team this year, has been drafted by the Cincinnati club, of the National Baseball league.

THEIR PLAN FRUSTRATED.

An Express Messenger Shoots and Kills a Would-Be Train Robber—His Pal Makes His Escape.

Council Bluffs, Ia., Oct. 4.—Lying at the morgue in this city with a bullet through his heart is a man, powerfully built, with black hair and mustache, about six feet tall, aged apparently 45 years. He was one of two men who held up the Kansas City passenger train on the Burlington road, three miles south of this city at midnight. Express Messenger Chas. Baxter killed him.

The two men boarded the train at Union Pacific transfer and climbed over the tender just as the train was crossing the Mosquito Creek bridge. Engineer Donnelly and Frank Holman, fireman, who were in charge of the engine, were ordered to slow up as soon as the train had crossed the bridge. While one man held a revolver on the engine crew his companion went back and cut off the baggage and mail cars, leaving the day coaches and sleepers standing on the main line.

Acting under orders the engineer pulled the train half a mile down the track where a stop was made. Here the robbers approached the express car and ordered Messenger Baxter to open the door. He refused to do so. Under compulsion Engineer Donnelly attached a stick of dynamite to the side door of the car and blew it open. In the meantime Messenger Baxter seized his gun, escaped from the door on the opposite side of the car. As soon as the door was opened one of the robbers entered the car, while his companion marched the engineer and fireman back to the engine.

Baxter crept around in front of the engine and seeing the robber keeping guard over the engine crew, fired one shot, killing him instantly. As soon as the shot was heard the robber in the car jumped to the ground and fled through a cornfield.

The dead man was picked up, placed on board the train which was backed into this city. The body was searched but nothing was found on it by which it could be identified. In the pockets were found about $15 in money and a watch and chain. Conductor William McGrew, who was in charge of the train, thinks the dead man is one George, of St. Joseph.

The robber who escaped is larger and taller than the dead man, being apparently about six feet in height. Both men were masked.

The door of the express car was badly shattered by the explosion of dynamite.

The robber inside the car was preparing to blow the safe at the time his companion was killed. He ceased operations at once, and no damage was done to the contents of the car, nor was anything taken.

BOUNDARY LINE DISPUTE.

The Trouble at Mount Baker Has Almost Reached an International Crisis.

Vancouver, B. C., Oct. 4.—The trouble at Mount Baker over the boundary line dispute has almost reached an international crisis. Tuesday a pack of goods on the way from Chilliwack to Mount Baker, for American-owned claims, was seized by the American customs authorities on the ground that the goods had crossed the boundary line into the states.

Deane, the provincial surveyor, who is fixing the boundary line, says that Canada will derive a stretch of land two miles wide by the moving of the line back where it was originally and should now be located.

Valuable American mines are included in this strip.

Oldest Editor Dead.

Denver, Col., Oct. 4.—C. E. Galloway, aged 89 years, died Wednesday from injuries received by being struck by a tramway car. He is believed to have been the oldest newspaper editor in the United States. He was born in Portage county, Ohio, learned the printing trade at Lawrenceburg, Ind., and published and edited newspapers in Ohio, Illinois, Missouri and Utah, among which were the Warsaw (Ill.) Signal and the Missouri Messenger.

Gen. Wood's Annual Report.

Washington, Oct. 4.—Gen. Leonard Wood, commanding United States forces in Cuba, has made his annual report to the war department. It contains his previous recommendation that all troops in Cuba be mounted, together with an account of the withdrawal of the troops during the past year. The health of the troops, he says, has been good, and their conduct is commended.

Yellow Fever Situation in Havana.

Washington, Oct. 4.—Private letters received from Havana indicate that much apprehension exists among the Americans there regarding the yellow fever, as the condition grows worse instead of improving. Civilian employes in Cuba seem to be subject to the disease and in several government offices many have been stricken. There is no fear as yet of the fever spreading among the troops.

Heavy Fighting at Coamassie.

London, Oct. 4.—A dispatch to the Morning Post from Coamassie reports that heavy fighting took place last Sunday between Col. Willocks' column and the Ashantis at Abu-Asu. The British lost three men killed and 28 wounded.

The Brass Trust Failed.

Bridgeport, Ct., Oct. 4.—The brass trust, known as the Brass Manufacturers' association, has failed. It was capitalized at $30,000,000. All the plants in the pool have withdrawn, and a war of prices is to follow.

WOMAN'S KIDNEY TROUBLES

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is Especially Successful in Curing this Fatal Woman's Disease.

Of all the diseases known with which the female organism is afflicted, kidney disease is the most fatal. In fact, unless early and correct treatment is applied, the weary patient seldom survives.

Being fully aware of this, Mrs. Pinkham, early in her career, gave exhaustive study to the subject, and in producing her great remedy for woman's ills—Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound—was careful to see that it contained the correct combination of herbs which was sure to control that fatal disease, woman's kidney troubles. The Vegetable Compound acts in harmony with the laws that govern the entire female system, and while there are many so called remedies for kidney troubles, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the only one especially prepared for women.

The following letters will show how marvelously successful it is:

Aug. 6, 1899.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I am failing very fast, since January have lost thirty-five or forty pounds. I have a yellow, muddy complexion, feel tired, and have bearing down pains. Menses have not appeared for three months; sometimes I am troubled with a white discharge, and I also have kidney and bladder trouble. . . I have been this way for a long time, and feel so miserable I thought I would write to you, and see if you could do me any good."—Miss EDNA FREDERICK, Troy, Ohio.

Sept. 10, 1899.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I have used Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound according to directions, and can say I have not felt so well for years as I do at present. Before taking your medicine a more miserable person you never saw. I could not eat or sleep, and did not care to talk with any one. I did not enjoy life at all. Now, I feel so well I cannot be grateful enough for what you have done for me. You are surely a woman's friend. Thanking you a thousand times, I remain, Ever yours, Miss EDNA FREDERICK, Troy, Ohio.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I have taken five bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and cannot praise it enough. I had headaches, leucorrhoea, falling of the womb, and kidney trouble. I also had a pain when standing or walking, and sometimes there seemed to be balls of fire in front of me, so that I could not see for about twenty minutes. Felt as tired in the morning when I got up as if I had had no sleep for two weeks. Had fainting spells, was down-hearted, and would cry."—Mrs. BERTHA OBER, Second and Clayton Sts., Chester Pa.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I cannot find language to express the terrible suffering I have had to endure. I had female trouble, also liver, stomach, kidney, and bladder trouble. . . I tried several doctors, also quite a number of patent medicines, and had despaired of ever getting well. At last I concluded to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and now, thanks to your medicine, I am a well woman. I can not praise your medicine too highly for I know it will do all, and even more, than it is recommended to do. I tell every suffering woman about your Vegetable Compound, and urge them to try it and see for themselves what it will do."—Mrs. MARY A. HIPPLE, No. Manchester, Ind.

THE GIRL WHO SMILES.

The wind was east, and the chimney smoked.
And the old brown house seemed dreary.
For nobody smiled, and nobody joked.
The young folks grumbled, the old folks croaked.
They had come home chilled and weary.
Then opened the door, and a girl came in;
Oh, she was homely—very;
Her nose was pug, and her cheek was thin.
There wasn't a dimple from brow to chin,
But her smile was bright and cheery.
She spoke not a word of the cold and damp,
Nor yet of the gloom about her.
But she mended the fire, and lighted the lamp,
And she put on the place a different stamp.
From that it had had without her.
Her dress, which was something in sober brown,
And with dampness nearly dripping,
She changed for a bright, warm, crimson gown,
And she looked so gay when she so came down.
They forgot that the air was nipping.
They forgot that the house was a dull old place,
And smoky from base to rafter,
And gloom departed from every face,
As they felt the charm of her mirthful grace,
And the cheer of her happy laughter.
Oh, give me the girl who will smile and sing,
And make all glad together!
To be plain or fair is a lesser thing,
But a kind, unselfish heart can bring Good cheer in the darkest weather.

CHAPTER XI.—CONTINUED.

"Go and hurry that buggy," he ordered, as he crushed the sheet of paper on which he had been nervously figuring. Then, springing up, he began pacing his office with impatient stride. A clerk glanced quickly up from his desk, watched him one moment with attentive eye, and looked significantly at his neighbor. "Old man's getting worse rattled every day," was the comment, as the crash of wheels through loose gravel announced the coming of the buggy, and Burleigh hastened out, labored into his seat, and took the whip and reins. The blooded mare in the shafts darted forward at the instant, but he gathered and drew her in; the nervous creature almost settling on her haunches.
"Say to Capt. Newhall when he gets back—that I'll see him this evening," called Burleigh over his shoulder.
"Now, damn you, go—if you want to!" and the lash fell on the glistening, quivering flank, and with her head pointed for the hard, open prairie, the pretty creature sped like mad over the smooth roadway and whirled the light buggy out past the scattered wooden tenements of the exterior limits of the frontier town—the tall white staff, tipped by its patch of color flapping in the mountain breeze, and the dingy wooden buildings on the distant bluff whirling into view as he spun around the corner where the village lost itself in the prairie; and there, long reaches ahead of him, just winding up the ascent to the post was a stylish team and trap. John Folsom and the girls had taken an early start and got ahead of him.
Old Stevens was up and about as Folsom's carriage drove swiftly through the garrison and passed straight out by the northeast gate. "I'll be back to see you in a moment," shouted the old driver smilelessly, as he shot by the lonely colonel, going, papers in hand, to his office, and Stevens well knew he was in for trouble. Already the story was blazing about the post that nothing but the timely arrival of Dean and his men had saved Folsom's ranch, and Folsom's people. Already the men, wondering and indignant at their young leader's arrest, were shouting over the sutler's bar their praise, and his denunciation of his treatment. Over the meeting of sister and brother at the latter's little tent let us draw a veil. He stepped forth in a moment and bade his other visitors welcome, shook hands eagerly with Loomis and urged their coming in, but he never passed from under the awning or "fly," and Folsom well knew the reason.
"Jump out, daughter," he said to Pappoose, and Loomis assisted her to alight and led her straight up to Dean, and for the first time in those two years the ex-cadet captain and the willow little schoolgirl with the heavy braids of hair looked into each other's eyes, and in Dean's there was amazement, and at least momentary delight. He still wore his field rig, and the rent in the dark-blue flannel shirt was still apparent. He was clasping Miss Folsom's hand and looking straight into the big dark eyes that were so unusually soft and humid, when Jessie's voice was heard as she came springing forth from the tent:
"Look, Nell, look! Your picture!" she cried, as with the bullet-marked carte de visite in her hand she flitted straight to her friend.
"Why, where did this come from?" asked Miss Folsom in surprise, "and what's happened to it?—all creased and black there!" Then both the girls and Loomis looked to him for explanation, while Folsom drove away, and even through the bronze and tan the boy was blushing.
"I borrowed it for a minute—at the ranch just as Jake came in wounded, and there was no time to return it, you know. We had to gallop right out."

"Then—you had it with you in the Indian fight?" cried Jess, in thrilling excitement. "Really? Oh, Nell! How I wish it were mine. But how'd it get so blackened there—and crushed? You haven't told us."
"Tell you some other time, Jess. Don't crowd a fellow," he laughed. But when his eyes stole their one quick glance at Elinor, standing there in silence, he saw the color creeping up like sunset glow all over her beautiful face as she turned quickly away. Lannion had told them of the close shave the lieutenant had had and the havoc played by that bullet in the breast pocket of his hunting shirt.

CHAPTER XII.

Meantime "Old Pecksniff," as commentators of the day among the graceless subs were wont to call Col. Stevens, was having his bad quarter of an hour. Leaving his team with the orderly, John Folsom had stamped into his presence unannounced, and after his own vigorous fashion opened the ball as follows:
"Stevens, what in the devil has that young fellow done to deserve arrest?"

"Oh, ah, shut the door, Mr. Adjutant," said the commanding officer, apprehensively, to his staff officer, "and—d I desire to confer with Mr. Folsom a moment," whereat the adjutant took the hint and then, bled himself out of the room.

"Now, ah, in the first place, Mr. Folsom, this is rather a long and—d painful story. I'm—ah, ah—in a peculiar position."
"For God's sake talk like a man and not like Burleigh," broke in the old trader, impulsively. "I've known you off and on over 20 years, and you never used to talk in this asinine way until you got to running with him. Come right to the point—What crime is young Dean charged with? Those girls of mine will have to know it. They will know he's in arrest. What can I tell them?"

"Crime—ah—is hardly the word, Folsom. There has been a misunderstanding of orders, in short, and he was placed under arrest before—ah—before I had been furnished with a mass of information that should have been sent to me before."

"Well, what fault is that of his? See here, man, you don't mean to say it is because he didn't get here three days ago? That's no crime, and I haven't knocked around with the army the last 40 years not to know the regulations in such matters. Do you mean without ever hearing what kept him and what splendid, spirited service he rendered there along the Laramie, that you've humiliated that fine young fellow and put him in arrest?"

Pecksniff whirled around in F's chair. "Really now, Mr. Folsom, I can't permit you to instruct me in my military duties. You have no conception of the way in which I've been ignored and misled in this matter. There are collateral circumstances brought about, er—forced on me in fact, by injudicious friends of this young man, and he—er—he must blame them—he must blame them, not me. Now if you'll permit me to glance over this mass of matter, I can the sooner do justice in the premises."

And over his goggles the colonel looked pleadingly up into his visitor's irate features.
"Read all you like, but be quick about it," was the angry rejoinder. "I want to take that boy back with me to town and confront him with one of his accusers this very day—the man I believe, by the ghost of Jim Bridger, is at the bottom of the whole business!" and Folsom flopped heavily and disgustedly into a chair, at sound of a rap at the door, which opened an inch and the adjutant's nose became visible at the crack.

"Maj. Burleigh, sir, would like to see you."

"And I'd like to see Maj. Burleigh!" stormed Folsom, springing to his feet. Commanding officers of the Stevens stamp had no terrors for him. He had known his man too long.

"Gentlemen, gentlemen!" cried Pecksniff. "I can have no disturbance now over this unfortunate matter. Really, Mr. Folsom, I cannot permit my office to be the scene of any—of any—"

But his words wandered aimlessly away into space as he discovered he had no listener. Folsom, finding that the major had apparently changed his mind and was not coming in, had changed his plan and was going out. He overtook Burleigh on the boardwalk in front and went straight to the point.

"Maj. Burleigh, you told me a short time ago that you had nothing to do with the allegations against this young gentleman who was placed in arrest here this afternoon, yet I learn from my own daughter that you spoke of my son to a brother officer of his in terms of disparagement the day you got aboard the car at Sidney. Mr. Loomis corroborates it and so does Miss Dean. I've heard of two other instances of your speaking sneeringly of him. Now I ask you as man to man what it is you have to tell? He has saved the lives of my son, his wife and child—and the people of the ranch, and by the Eternal I'm his friend and mean to see justice done him!"

Burleigh listened with solemn face and with no attempt to interrupt. He waited patiently until Folsom came to a full stop before he spoke at all. Then his voice was eloquent of undeserved rebuke—of infinite sympathy. "Mr. Folsom," he said, "it would be useless for me to deny that before I knew your charming daughter or her—ah—very interesting friend I did speak in their presence—ah—incautiously, perhaps, of Mr. Dean, but it was in continuance of a conversation begun before we boarded the car, and what I said was more in sorrow than in criticism. The young gentleman had attracted my attention—my favorable—ah—opinion on the trip to the Big Horn, and I was—ah—simply disappointed in his conduct on the way back. It was perhaps due to—ah—inexperience only, and my whole object in coming here in haste this afternoon was to bear testimony to his ability and zeal as a troop commander, and to urge—ah—Col. Stevens to reconsider his action and restore him at once to duty. I had hoped, sir, to be here—ah—ahead of you and to have driven him in my buggy—ah—to meet you, but I am disappointed—I am disappointed in more ways than one."

Folsom stood and wiped his streaming face and looked the speaker square in the eye, and Burleigh stood the scrutiny with unlooked-for nerve. Long years at the poker-table had given him command of his features, and the faculty of appearing the personification of serene confidence in his "hand," when the twitching of a nerve might cost a thousand dollars. Folsom was no match for him in such a game. Little by little the anger and suspicion faded from his eyes, and a shame-faced look crept into them. Had he really so misjudged, so wronged this gentleman? Certainly there was every appearance of genuine sympathy and feeling in Burleigh's benevolent features. Certainly he was here almost as soon as he himself had come, and very possibly for the same purpose. It was all that old fool Pecksniff's doing after all. Folsom had known him for years and always as more or less of an ass—a man of so little judgment that, though a major in the line at the outbreak of the war, he had never been trusted with a command in the field, and here he was now a full colonel with only three companies left him. Burleigh saw his bluff was telling, and he took courage.

"Come with me," he said, "and let me reassure you," and the doors of the commanding officer's sanctum opened at once to the omnipotent disburser of government good things, Folsom following at his heels. "Col. Stevens," he began, the moment he was inside, and before the colonel could speak at all, "in a moment of exasperation and extreme nervous—ah—depression the night I—er—started east so hurriedly after a most exhausting journey from the Big Horn, I spoke disparagingly of the action of Lieut. Dean in face of the Indians the day we met Red Cloud's band, but on mature reflection I am convinced I misjudged him. I have been thinking it all over. I recall how vigilant and dutiful he was at all times, and my object in hurrying out here to-day at—ah—almost the instant I heard of his arrest, was to put in the best words I could think of in his behalf—to—ah—urge you to reconsider your action, especially in view of all the—ah—eulogiums passed upon his conduct in this recent raid on the Laramie."

The colonel whirled around upon him as he had on Folsom. "Maj. Burleigh," he began, "I call you to witness that I am the most abused man in the army. Here I am, sir, 35 years in service, a full colonel, with a war record with the regulars that should command respect, absolutely ignored by these mushroom generals at Omaha and elsewhere—stripped of my command and kept in ignorance of the movements of my subordinates. Why, sir," he continued, lashing himself on, as he rose from his chair, "here's my junior at Frayne giving orders to my troop, sir; presumes to send them scouting the Laramie bottoms, when every man is needed here, and then, when, as it happens, my officer and his men get into a fight and drive the Indians, to whom does he report, sir? Not to me, sir—not to his legitimate commander, but he sends couriers to Laramie and to Frayne, and ignores me entirely."

A light dawned on Burleigh in an instant. Well he knew that Dean's reasons for sending couriers to those guard posts of the Platte were to warn them that a war party had crossed into their territory, and was now in flight. There was nothing to be gained by sending a man galloping back to the line of the railway 75 miles to the rear—no earthly reason for his doing so. But the fact that he had sent runners to officers junior in rank to Stevens, and had not sent one to him, fairly "stuck in the crop" of the captious old commander, and he had determined to give the youngster a lesson. But now the mail was in, and dispatches from various quarters, and a telegram from Omaha directing him to convey to Lieut. Dean the thanks and congratulations of the general commanding the department, who had just received full particulars by wire from Cheyenne, and Stevens was glad enough to drop the game, and Burleigh equally glad of this chance to impress Folsom with the sense of his influence, as well as of his justice.

"I admit all you say, colonel. I have long—ah—considered you most unfairly treated, but really—ah—in this case of Lieut. Dean's, it is, as I said before, inexperience and—ah—the result of—ah—er—not unnatural loss of—er—balance at a most exciting time. A word of—ah—admonition, if you will pardon my suggestion, is all he probably needs, for he has really behaved very well—ah—surprisingly well in conducting this—ah—pursuit."

And so it was settled that later the colonel was to see Mr. Dean and admonish accordingly, but that meantime the adjutant should go and whisper in his ear that his arrest was ended, and all would be explained later, thereby releasing him before the girls discovered the fact that he was confined to his tent.

But the adjutant came too late. The fearful eyes of one, the flushed and anxious faces of both damsels, and the set look in the eyes of both the young officers at Dean's tent, as the adjutant approached, told him the cat was out of the bag. "The explanation cannot be made too promptly for me, sir," said Dean, as he received the colonel's message and permitted the adjutant to depart without presenting him to the two prettiest girls he had seen in a year. "Now, Loomis, just as quick as possible I want you to go with me to that man Burleigh. I'll cram his words down his throat."

"Hush, Dean, of course, I'll stand by you! But both girls are looking. Wait until to-morrow."

How many a project for the morrow is dwarfed or drowned by events unlooked for—unsuspected at the time! Not ten minutes later Folsom and Burleigh came strolling together to the little tent. Ashamed of his apparently unjust accusation, Folsom had begged the quartermaster's pardon and insisted on his coming with him and seeing the young people before driving back to town. The horses were being groomed at the picket line. The western sun was low. Long shadows were thrown out over the sward and the air was full of life and exhilaration. The somber fears that had oppressed the quartermaster an hour earlier were retiring before a hope that then he dare not entertain.

"You—your stood by me like a trump, Burleigh," old Folsom was saying, "even after I'd abused you like a thief. If I can ever do you a good turn don't fail to let me know."

And Burleigh was thinking then and there how desperately in need of a good turn he stood that minute. What if Folsom would back him? What if—
But as they came in full view of the picket line beyond the row of tents, the major's eagerly searching gaze was rewarded by a sight that gave him a sudden pause. Halted and examining with almost professional interest the good points of a handsome little bay, Lieut. Loomis and Jessie Dean were in animated chat. Halted and facing each other, he with glowing admiration in his frank blue eyes, she with shy pleasure in her joyous face, Dean and Elinor Folsom stood absorbed in some reminiscence of which he was talking eagerly. Neither saw the coming pair. Neither heard the rapid beat of bounding hoofs near them in eager haste. Neither noted that a horseman reined in, threw himself from saddle and handed Burleigh a telegraphic message which, with trembling hands, he opened and then read with starting eyes.

"My heaven, Folsom!" he cried. "I ought to have known something was wrong when I got orders to have every mule and wheel ready. Everything's to be rushed to the Big Horn at once. Just as you predicted, Red Cloud's band has broken loose. There's been a devil of a fight not eighty miles from Frayne!"

HUMOR FROM THE CAMERA.

Photographers Are Often the Witnesses of Very Queer Phases of Life.

"Many ludicrous developments happen in the studio of a country photographer, aside from what the chemicals bring out in the dark room," said a man who has photographed rustics for many years, relates Lippincott's Magazine. "I recollect one Fourth of July that a young farmer and his sweetheart came to me to have some tinctures taken together. I posed them on a flight of stairs with a balustrade between them. When I came from my dark room after developing the plate, the young fellow stepped up to me and said: 'Sa-y, couldn't ye take that over again?'"

"Why, what's the matter?" I asked, in surprise.

"We ain't goin' to like that picture a bit," he answered, evasively.

"But, why not?" I persisted.

"Wal," he blurted out, blushing to the roots of his hair, "she's too danged fur off." He refused to pay 50 cents for a new sitting, so at last they bore away the tinctures as they were. But the next day he came back to my gallery very wrathful. "Sa-a-y," he fairly shouted when he saw me, "take that durned girl off this picture. I'm mad with her."

"Often when I have my head under the cloth to get the focus, loving couples, confident that I cannot possibly see them, take advantage of the moment to kiss each other fervidly, but with great silence. I remember, too, coming out of my dark room one time to find a rustic with one of my bottles pouring a thick, dark, liquid into the hollow of his hand. 'I guess you don't mind if I use a little of your hair ile,' he said, and promptly rubbed the stuff into his hair. 'It was a varnish for negatives, made to dry and harden very rapidly,' and before I could get that picture taken, hurrying feverishly, he had to go out and get his head shaved. It is hard to believe how 'green' people can really be in this age and generation until a man drives a tincture studio on wheels through the rural districts of our fair land."

A Large Yarn.

"Yep!" said the voracious Kansan, from whom the inquisitively inclined tourist from New England was trying to corkscrew a characteristic story. "It was kinder funny, come to think about it. You see, the cow was picketed out with a 90-foot lariat, and the wind ketched her and whooped her up in the air plumb the whole length of the rope, and held her there till the storm was over. And then she climbed down safe and sound to the ground. Aw, the wind cuts up some mighty queer capers here sometimes, lemme tell you, stranger!"—Lumbeck.

A Reasoner.

"Mrs. Featherwell's new hat is the very latest style, isn't it?" remarked Mr. Blykins.

"Yes," answered his wife. "But how did you know it? You say you pay no attention to fashions."

"There couldn't be any mistake in this case, if it weren't in the latest style, she wouldn't dare wear anything so ugly."—Washington Star.

The Senate Bill.

[Courier-Journal.]

THE Republican Senators and eight Democrats at the session Tuesday passed the bill known as the Senate Majority Bill, so amended, however, as to make it practically a new measure.

It is the one that the Senate has been working on for several days. It provides for a State Board, consisting of one Democrat and one Republican, and the Attorney General as umpire; for a county board, to be appointed by the County Judge, consisting of one Democrat and one Republican, and the Circuit Clerk as umpire.

Only ministerial powers are vested in the boards, and the clerks and sheriffs of election are alternated between the two political parties.

Election officers must be appointed from lists made up by the county committees.

Coal Trust and The Strike.

Everybody knows that the coal trust is vastly interested in the re-election of Mr. McKinley.

The popular belief is that it has shown its desire to secure four more years of trust domination at Washington by a contribution of $500,000 to the Hanna corruption fund.

Yet it has not been willing to subordinate its greed and lust of oppression to the good of its party by doing justice to its industrial slaves in the anthracite region.

On the contrary, it has caused serious, if not fatal, harm to the cause it upholds, in giving a series of object lessons of trust rapacity and cruelty in the short history of the current strike.

The wedding of Miss Anna Frazee, of Maysville, and Mr. Robert Graham Humlong is announced to take place in November.

CURRENT-HUKILL.

Mr. Isaac Newtown Current and Miss Jennie Hukill planned and executed a surprise on their friends Tuesday by going to Cincinnati and getting married. The wedding was not an elopement, the contracting parties merely choosing that plan for a quiet wedding.

The groom is a well known young man of this city, and is agent for the Jung Brewing Co., of Cincinnati. The groom is a pretty and stylish daughter of Wm. Hukill, Jr., who has lately removed to Lexington. They will go to housekeeping on Seventh street in the residence lately vacated by Mrs. J. W. Hite.

A Liberal Invitation.

AN invitation which includes every lady in Bourbon, Scott, Clark, Nicholas, Montgomery and Harrison, has been made by Mrs. Corne Watson, of Paris, to her annual Fall exhibition of millinery, which occurs to-day and to-morrow. Mrs. Watson's very select line of pattern hats and bonnets includes smart hats, fetching hats, haughty hats, for ultra fashionable patrons, and demure hats and mourning bonnets. Mrs. Watson and her clever assistant, Miss Ray Ceiner, of Cincinnati, have been very busy preparing for the display which will prove a feast of harmonious colors for the ladies. Remember the days—to-day and to-morrow—and don't fail to attend.

The Public Library Fund.

THE sum of $1,064 has been collected by private subscription this week for the Public Library Fund by the soliciting committee. This brings the total fund up to seven thousand dollars, and it is the intention to begin work on the building when the sum reaches ten thousand. Several sites for the building are being considered.

Several children have this week sent in contributions, and it is suggested that it would be an admirable thing to have the children interested in the Library, and their contributions will stimulate that interest.

Found In Some Fruit.

MRS. W. C. USSERY lost a handsome diamond and pearl brooch Tuesday while attending the trotting races at Lexington, and believed until Wednesday night that she had been robbed by a sneak thief. It seems that before going to the races Mrs. Ussery stopped in at McGurk &amp; Spears' store, in Lexington, to buy some fruit, and on Wednesday morning Mr. Spears, in looking over some fruit, found a valuable diamond and pearl brooch, which proved to be the one lost by Mrs. Ussery.

If you cannot read this small print at a distance of 14 inches your eyesight is failing and should have immediate attention:

Imperial spectacles and eyeglasses have perfect lenses, always perfectly centred and made of purest material, set in frames of the highest elasticity and consequently of greatest durability, united with the utmost lightness and elegance. When both frames and lenses are scientifically fitted by Dr. C. H. Bowen's system they always give satisfaction for they are perfect. Never buy cheap spectacles, nor of men who do not know how to fit them. You will get poorly adjusted spectacles, or poor, imperfect lenses, and are better off without any glasses than with either of these defects. Buy Imperial spectacles of a reliable, skillful dealer, and they will last longer without change and be cheapest in the end.

We have engaged the services of Dr. C. H. Bowen who will visit our store on the second and last Thursdays of each month and invite all to call and have their eyes examined, for which there is no charge. Satisfaction guaranteed or money refunded.

Next visit—Thursday, Oct. 11, 1900. Hello, 170.

OVER THE HOUSETOPS.

Over the housetops the hills of blue,
And a river, in splendid race;
And meadows, sweet-smiling, as if they knew
Your beautiful dreaming face!
How can I weave a rhyme of them?
Dear, there are singers grand,
Who reap the stars from the living blue—
Not the lilies of the land.

So there's the hope! While they sing the stars,
And anthem on anthem swells,
I may hear God's word—to seldom heard!—
In the song of the morning bells.
In the song of the bells! . . . But in dawn or dew—
Whatever the world may be,
They are always singing a song of you—
One song to the soul of me!

And that is a song of Duty done—
Not heard in the battle strife,
But where the hands of a faithful one Reap in the lilies of life.
Where you breathe with roses the brow
of Care,
And sing of the light! the light!
When you bring the song of the angels near
—And hear God's voice in the night!

The Value of Sympathy

By George S. Cuthbertson.

From the Ladies' World, New York. Reprinted
by special permission.

WITH a shadow of impatience on her wrinkled brow, Mrs. Page tossed the garment she was mending on the table and leaned wearily back in the old-fashioned willow rocking chair. Turning to her husband, who sat by the window reading, she said, complainingly:

"Dear me! Jonas, I believe I've got one of the worst headaches I've had in many a day. An' there's such a stitch in my left side, I really—"

"Thar ye go it ag'in, Car'liny!" exclaimed Mr. Page, irritably, as he crushed the newspaper in his hand and flung it into the rack above his head. "I vow I never saw the beat!
Wimmen are curious critters—allers
makin' sich a great how-d'-ye-do 'bout nothin'. Got some new ache or pain ev'ry minit of the day. Then they be forever whinin' an' tellin' ye of it!
Ye never hear none o' us men groanin'
over ev'ry triflin' thing that happens to us."

"Now, Jonas, ye know better'n that,
but ye allers was so onreason'ble; no symp'hy for anybody, an' no feelin' mor'n a stick o' wood! If I'd had the least idee in my girlhood days how heartless you was, I never would hev married!"

"Lan! sakes, Car'liny! don't din that old story into my ears ag'n! Three hundred an' sixty-five days in the year, I've heard ye singin' it reg'lar, till I kin repeat the hull b'iss'ness, word for word. If I'm heartless an' crool, as ye 'cuse me of bein', it's yer groanin'
on like this what's made me. Ev'ry-body has his own ills to bear an' I ain't exempted from 'em more'n ye be, yet I ain't a-tellin' ye of it all the time. 'Nothin' thing, I firmly believe it's over half 'magination that ails ye—ye let yer mind git too much control over yer body!"

As these taunting remarks left his lips, the ill-natured spouse seized his hat and flounced out of the house, slamming the door behind him.

Two silent, unbidden teardrops trickled gently down the thin, faded cheeks of Mrs. Page, as she bent far forward and resumed her sewing.

"Mebbe I am rather fretful," she said to herself, thoughtfully. "I'll try to keep my troubles to myself after this; but it's hard to git no pity when one's feelin' so miser'ble."

"Jonas allers looks to me for sym-p'hy, when he's sick," she continued.
"He'll go to his bed an' take on an' hev me wait on him; with me it's diff'rent—I've got to keep workin' away, no matter how bad I feel.
'Magination! Jess you wait till Jonas Page has his next ailin' spell an' see how I'll symp'thize with him!"

Her eyes gleamed and glowed, and her lips closed tightly with a peculiar twitch of determination.

Nothing more was seen of Jonas until he came to supper. He appeared somewhat disconsolate and had his left hand wrapped up in his red bandana handkerchief. He didn't say anything when he removed the covering and an ugly, ragged wound, extending half way across the palm, was disclosed to view. He looked considerably disappointed, however, when he found that the sight of it attracted only a passing glance from "Car'liny," and didn't even arouse her womanly curiosity enough to inquire how it had happened.

How tantalizing she could act. She didn't offer to assist him in binding it up, let alone express regret at its occurrence, but stood by the stove dishing up the potatoes as unconcerned as though nothing out of the usual had taken place.

Jonas heaved a heavy sigh and walked silently into the pantry, where on the little corner shelf he procured a strip of court plaster with which he carefully drew the edges of the wound together.

The evening meal was eaten in moody silence. Jonas always drank two cups of tea, but rather than make the first "break in the ice" by asking for the cup to be replenished, he got along with one. All the time he kept wondering what could possibly have occasioned this remarkable alteration in his wife's deportment; he finally came to the conclusion it was owing to the indifference he had manifested concerning her headache.

"This kind o' actin' is somethin'

new," he grumbled, on his way to the barn to finish the chores. "If she's so sensitive as to git her back up 'bout a triflin' piece o' nonsense like that, she kin jest keep it there! The only time I ever got down on my knees to her was when I popped the marriage question; an' now if she thinks that by goin' 'round with a pout on her face, she'll git me to back down an' eat humble pie, she's barkin' up the wrong tree. When I say a thing, it's said fer all time!"

His hand was exceedingly sore; it was continually in his way and everything he attempted to do he injured
it anew.

At length when he seated himself beside the brindle cow and devoted himself to the milking, which task
he had to perform with a single hand,
his temper got quite beyond his management.

"Lan! sakes!" he sputtered, "Car-liny don't seem to care no more fer
me than if I was some scallawag dog.
If she had one spark o' kindness, she would hev offered her services with the chores. She might a-done the milkin' anyway!"

While conducting this one-sided conversation, he proceeded to extract the milk with quick, savage jerks and entirely forgot to accord the worthy bovine the respect she believed was due to an animal of her rank. Not possessing the power of speech she made use of the only available means at hand of successfully remonstrat-ing against such barbarous treatment; for, concentrating a vast amount of strength in her right hind leg, she unexpectedly exhibited a surprising degree of celerity and encassered Mr. Jonas Page's shinbone with her rough, hard hoof in a manner that was not calculated to inspire undying gratitude; at least Jonas didn't take it that way, if we may regard the forcible language he used (we will not repeat it) as a candid expression of his feelings.

"Drat the beast!" he exclaimed, angrily, picking up his pail, which had been kicked some distance to one side, and recommending operations with gentler movements. "What's got into her—seem's though everything on the farm was fitchin' to git into a fight!
I'll bet a dollar my leg's black an'
blue; there's a lump comin' on it big's
a hen's egg. I'll probably be lame now fer a month!"

His work at the barn finally concluded, he hobbled slowly into the house. Mrs. Page had gone to bed and Jonas, disliking to disturb her, hunted fully half an hour for the liniment bottle. Man-like, he at first neglected to procure a light, but felt in its usual place, in the darkness, and failed to locate it. He ran across the ink bottle, however; it was on the corner shelf, perilously near the edge, and his sleeve brushing against it rolled it over on its side, spilling
a portion of its contents on the shelf and the remainder on the spotless floor of the pantry.

The last letter he wrote he lost the cork out of the bottle and thoughtlessly set it away without putting in a new stopper.

"I'll ketch it now!" he declared, rue-fully, when he had obtained a light and taken a view of the damage done.
"Ev'ry 'tarnal thing's gone wrong today. Where in the name o' goodness is that pesky liniment? House an' all in it goin' to wreck an' ruin, jist through sheer carelessness! Car'liny's so slack—no place fer nuthin' and nuthin' in it's place! That ink wouldn't hev be'n spilt if the liniment bottle was where it orber be."

Standing on a chair and holding the lamp high above his head, he scanned carefully each of the top shelves and then looked through the cupboards; but the object of his quest stubbornly refused to be found. In desperation he pulled the cover off the salt barrel and even pecked into the flour-bin.

"No use talkin'. I've got to hev that liniment. If I don't bathe my leg with it I won't be able to git onto my feet to-morrow," he said, querulously.
Then raising his voice to a pitch sufficiently loud to awaken the dead, were it possible, he cried:

"Car'liny, I say Car'liny, where's the liniment? Where the deuce d'ye keep it? Half the time 'tain't in its place!"

"Of course it ain't in its place when you git done a-usin' it," came the deliberate retort in chilling accents from the bedroom. "Perhaps, if you'd take the trouble to look out on the wash-bench, you'd find it where ye had it 'fore supper."

"Spunky's ever," commented Jonas,
under his breath. "Sure 'nough—come to think 'bout it—I did hev the plaguey thing there dopin' my sore hand. Why didn't I hev my wits 'bout me without askin' Car'liny; might a-known I wouldn't git a civil answer."

This particular liniment was a preparation in which Jonas had unshaken faith; and he proceeded, with many stuffed grunts and groans, to apply a liberal quantity to his injured leg. It was indeed a severe and painful bruise;
the swelling was apparently getting larger and taking on a purple hue.

"Wal, I guess I kin retire—at last," he said, looking at the old clock in the kitchen corner, whose faithful hands pointed to the eleventh hour.

As he sunk down on the soft feather bed and drew the warm clothing about him, a pleasant sense of restfulness came over his weary frame; but his mind was far from experiencing a similar sensation. A train of sober reflection had taken possession of it.
"I ain't no more exempted from ills
than you be, yet I ain't tellin' ye of 'em all the time." These words kept coming before him incessantly, and just the least bit of a pang of regret that he had uttered them began to gnaw at his heart strings.

A multitude of ills were coming upon him a good deal sooner than he anticipated. He wasn't prepared for their visit, and, somehow or other, his stock of fortitude appeared exceedingly small. It was very difficult to lie there and suffer and receive no tender words of sympathy to which he was accustomed when ill or in trouble on previous occasions.

How he had boasted of his wonderful power of endurance—"he wouldn't whine over every triflin' thing that happened to him"—oh, no; yet, several times he checked himself from pouring forth a doleful rehearsal of his afflictions into "Car'liny's" slumbering ears.
"Christopher Columbus!" he groaned.
"What'll come next—ow—um! Job was afflicted an' so am I. Ouch—Car-liny—ow—um—get the toothache drops—my confounded head's going to jump off!"

Mrs. Page, thus rudely aroused, sprang up in alarm and confusion. She heard only the sound of her husband's stentorian voice; she didn't understand what he said, but imagined from the tone that something serious was wrong.

"What's the matter, Jonas?" she asked, rather excitedly.
"Lan! sakes, Car'liny—matter? It's toothache—the worst I've had in a long time! Um—ouch—git the drops,
I say—quick!"

"Thar ye go it ag'in, Jonas, I declar'
I never saw yer ekil. Men are more bother'n they're worth, twice over!
Got some new ache or pain both day
an' night; an' now you hev the impudence to waken me out o' a sound sleep to go whinin' an' tellin' me of it!"

"But, Car'liny, I—"
"Oh, you needn't expect any sym-p'hy from me; an' if ye think ye're goin' to lay thar an' take on till mornin', an' keep me from sleepin', ye're mistaken! 'Nothin' thing, I firmly believe it's more'n ralf 'magination that ails ye—ye let yer mind git too much control over yer body. You kin hunt up them drops yourself—I'm goin' upstairs an' see if I kin git quietness and peace!"

With these words Mrs. Page sprang out of bed and lightly ascended the stairway, leaving Jonas so surprised and bewildered that for a moment he absolutely forgot all about the pain in his tooth.

"Car'liny's givin' me a dose o' my own medicine, I guess," and a sudden tinge of shame dyed his face. "Whew!
'nother tooth beginnin' to howl an'
jump—s if one wasn't plenty. I've got to hev them drops an' I might's well git them fust as last."

He swung himself cautiously out of bed and hobbled to the pantry. Fortunately his search was not as prolonged as when seeking the liniment.
But, to his great disappointment,
scarcely enough of the remedy remained for one application. The relief, though immediate, was only temporary. The pain returned in less than an hour. The rest had undoubtedly recuperated it, for it seemed to possess double the force.

Positively, Jonas was in a deplorable condition; his hand throbbled in a disagreeable manner, his leg was swollen and stiff and sore, and his teeth—well, words are utterly inadequate to express the extreme pain they caused him.

In his younger days he attended church regularly and evinced considerable activity as a member; and now in his misery he remembered and repeated several of his old-time prayers.
Their good effects, however, were destroyed by the flow of stronger language that invariably succeeded them.

"I've stood this thing long's I'm goin'
to," he said, fiercely. "Here's three mortal hours gone by an' 'tain't no better. I'll jist hitch up an' drive over to Ridgeway, rouse up the dentist, an'
hev these tomentin' teeth yanked out in a jiffy."

Donning his greatcoat and muffler, he proceeded to the barn. No sooner had the outside door closed at his heels, than Mrs. Page's white-robed figure came gliding down the stairway.

With a lamp in hand, she entered the bedchamber. Disorder reigned supreme. Four medicine bottles, prominent among them the flask of liniment which for once had not proved equal to the emergency, two wet towels, a basin of water and a bag of hops were strung over the bureau. A couple of quilts and a pillow lay on the floor, while the other bedclothes were rolled in a ball down by the footboard.

As Mrs. Page noted these particulars, the stern lines around her eyes and mouth relaxed; and a look, in which anxiety and compassion were blended, passed over her features.

"Poor Jonas!" she murmured, audibly.
"I wonder if he's yet found out
the value of sympathy?"

After dressing herself, she commenced restoring the room to rights and had nearly succeeded when the sound of carriage wheels reached her ears, and, glancing out, she perceived in the hazy dusk of the early morning that it was Jonas driving rapidly away.

When he returned, some two hours later, Mrs. Page noticed directly that her husband's face wore a radically different expression. She first thought the loss of his two front teeth was accountable for the change in his appearance, but this she realized to be an erroneous idea when Jonas came into the house and, walking (or rather limping) straight up to her, placed both his hands on her shoulders.

"Car'liny," and his voice sounded strangely husky. "Car'liny, you an' I hev be'n a-livin' together an' a-bearin'
each other's burdens nigh onto 20 years and yesterday we was foolish 'nough to quarrel 'bout the small—I mean the great matter o' sympathy. Comin' home from Ridgeway I got to thinkin' it all over; I kin see now where I was wrong. Fact is, I've be'n too independent lately—I needed the lesson ye taught me last night. Life's an up-hill road an' it's best to lean on one 'nother when we come to the rough places. I want to ask yu to bury the hatchet—
will ye do it?"

And Mrs. Page answered seriously:
"I will!"

BURNED AT THE STAKE

Negro Guilty of Assaulting a Woman Put to Death by a Mob.

The Culprit Confessed His Crime—The Woman's Husband Lighted the Fire—Other Crimes of Like Nature Planned.

Wetumpka, Ala., Oct. 3.—Winfield Townsend, alias Floyd, a Negro, was burned at the stake in the little town of Eclectic, 15 miles from this place, a half hour after midnight Tuesday morning. The Negro's crime was an attempted assault on Mrs. Lonnie Harrington, whose husband set fire to the fuel which reduced Townsend's body to ashes.

Monday afternoon at 1 o'clock Townsend, who was a nephew of the Negro Floyd who was hanged in Wetumpka week before last for an attempted assault, made an assault on Mrs. Harrington. Mrs. Harrington was at a cotton gin in Eclectic and about a mile out of town. The Negro came to the house and told Mrs. Harrington that her husband had sent him to get 20 cents from her. She told him she had no change. The Negro left but returned in about ten minutes. The woman's screams were heard by Bob Nichols, a Negro. He ran to the house in time to see the Negro escape. As soon as Mrs. Harrington was restored to consciousness Nichols gave the alarm. The news spread rapidly. All the stores at Eclectic were instantly closed, the ginners and sawmills shut down, the people left their wagons in the road and their plows in the field and gathered for a pursuit of the Negro.

After an exciting chase the Negro was caught. Floyd was taken to the edge of the village, and preparations for his death were quickly made. A rope was flung over the limb of a big oak and a hundred men stood ready to swing him up.

Then a halt was called and the manner of death discussed by the mob. A vote was taken and the balloting showed a majority of the crowd to favor death at the stake. The stake was prepared and the Negro was bound to it with chains. Pine knots were piled about him and the flames started by the husband of Townsend's victim. As the flames leaped to the Negro's flesh he uttered wild cries to God for mercy and help. The crowd looked on deaf to his cries and in an hour the Negro was reduced to ashes.

Townsend, before being bound, confessed the crime, and said he was also implicated with Alex Floyd, who was hanged two weeks ago for an attempted assault on Miss Kate Pearson. He said he and Floyd had planned for other crimes of like character.

WANTS BIG DAMAGES.

C. M. Polk Sues Pinkerton Detective Agency for $100,000 Damages for Unwarranted Persecution.

Kansas City, Oct. 3.—Chas. M. Polk, who was arrested on the charge of being implicated in the last big train robbery that occurred in Jackson county, Tuesday filed a suit here for $100,000 damages against the National Pinkerton Detective agency. The Missouri Pacific west-bound passenger train was robbed near Leeds, six miles below Kansas City on the night of September 23, 1898. The five bandits who blew up the express car with dynamite, secured, according to the express officials, only forty or fifty dollars.

The suit filed Tuesday is the outcome of what Polk alleges was unwarranted persecution.

THE PRINCESS HATZFELD.

She Is in No Danger of Losing the Legacy of $1,000,000 Bequeathed to Her By Mr. Huntington.

New York, Oct. 3.—Princess Hatzfeld, the adopted daughter of C. P. Huntington, is in no danger of losing the legacy of $1,000,000 in trust bequeathed to her by the Southern Pacific millionaire. It was said in the office of the Southern Pacific railroad in this city Tuesday that Mr. Huntington's will left the trust fund to the princess specifically, and it made no difference whether or not adoption papers could be produced.

Biggest Bridge Span in the World. Quebec, Oct. 3.—In the presence of Sir Wilfred Laurier and a large number of invited guests, the cornerstone was laid Tuesday of the new Quebec bridge over the St. Lawrence. This bridge will have one span that will be the biggest in the world. It will cost $5,000,000 and is to be finished in 1904.

REVENUE BOATS.

A Flotilla of Five, Recently Completed, Has Sailed on the Inside Route for Cuba.

New York, Oct. 2.—The flotilla of five United States revenue boats built at the Nixon shipyard in 120 days, according to contract, sailed Monday on the inside route to Cuba, Havana being the objective point. The flagship No. 7 is 70 feet long while the other four are 60 feet in length. Each boat carries on her forward deck a rapid fire gun. The boats will be used in patrolling the inlets and coast of Cuba in search for smugglers and revenue evaders.

The boats will sail down Staten Island sound to the Karitan river to the Delaware, to the Chesapeake Bay to the Dismal Swamp to Florida Keys and thence across the gulf of Mexico to Havana. The boats in a trial trip in Newark Bay developed a speed of 11½ knots. They will reach Havana in about a week. It is the first time any government fleet has taken the inside route to Cuba. Each boat carried a crew of eight men.

STOVE MANUFACTURERS.

They Will Meet in Chicago October 16 to Take Action on Forming a National Association.

Pittsburgh, Pa., Oct. 2.—Representatives of some of the 490 stove making concerns scattered throughout the country are to meet at the auditorium, Chicago, on October 16, to take definite action on the formation of the National Stove Manufacturing Co., which will be capitalized at about $60,000,000, aside from a possible large issue of bonds. The promoters of the vast enterprise have already taken out a charter under the laws of the state of Delaware and something like 250 of the stove manufacturing companies have optioned their properties and business.

John W. Baker, the corporation attorney and financier of Philadelphia, is at the head of the enterprise.

HE BASELY DECEIVED HER.

Let Her Think She Was Reforming Him, When He Had No Bad Habits to Break.

"So your engagement is broken?" said the girl in gray, according to Pearson's Weekly.

"Yes, it is," replied the girl in brown, frowning at the recollection.

"What was the matter?"

"He basely deceived me," answered the girl in brown. "You see, it was this way: I asked him one day to promise me that he never again would smoke cigarettes, and he promised. Then I asked him to refrain from the use of tobacco in any form, and he promised to do that. Later I told him I had a horror of anyone who touched liquor, and he agreed never to touch it. After that I suggested that I thought clubs had a bad influence on young men and I should expect him to give them up, and he said he would. I also took up the subject of gambling, and made him promise that he would stop playing cards and betting on the races."

"There was no longer anything in it to make it interesting."

"He did."

"Broke his promise, did he?"

"Oh, no! I could have forgiven that. But just when I was congratulating myself that I at least had reformed one young man I found that he didn't require any reforming. He wasn't addicted to a single one of the habits I made him promise to break. It was a terrible shock, and I broke the engagement at once. There was no longer anything in it to make it interesting."

SHE WOULD GET THERE.

It Was None of the Ticket Seller's Business Where She Wanted to Go.

He was long, lean, lank and raw-boned, and he shuffled up to the ticket window at the Union passenger station much after the fashion of a scared canine when he approaches his master to receive a well-earned thrashing. He got as far as the outside railing and stood there with a bashful blush gazing at the man behind the brass bars, says the St. Joseph News.

"Come in; come in; make yourself at home," was the encouraging welcome from within. He accepted the invitation and brought up against the marble ticket counter with the man behind the brass bars.

"Say, that," he said, in a half whisper, "is this the place where you get tickets for the kays?"

"Yes; where do you want to go? Hurry up; we're rushed."

"Well, sir," he replied, shifting a square inch of plug tobacco from one cheek to the other, "hev you all got enny long-distance tickets inter Kentucky?"

His case was equalled by that of the old lady with a sunbonnet, who said:

"I want a ticket to Little county."

"What place in Platte county?" inquired the ticket man.

"No place in Platte county; I want to go to Platte county, and it's none of your business where I'm going to visit. You sell me the ticket to Platte county, and I'll get there."

Antiquities of Baseball.

A north Missouri editor, who first studied baseball rules while a Sunday school boy, enters into the following antiquities of the national game: "The devil was the first coacher. Eve stole first. Adam stole second. When Isaac met Rebecca at the well she was walking with a pitcher. Sampson struck out a good many when he beat the Philistines. Moses made his first run when he slew the Egyptians. Cain made a base hit when he killed Abel. Abraham made a sacrifice. The prodigal son made a home run. David was a long-distance thrower and Moses shut out the Egyptians at the Red sea."—Chicago Chronicle.

A National Reputation.

About a year ago Mrs. Henry O. Silkman of Maplewood, Pa., wrote: "I have learned of your Lotion, the wonderful cure for unsightly eruptions, through friends in Fulton, N. Y., and Evansville, Ind., and I am anxious to procure the article for friends who, I am desirous, should use it." This valuable preparation has been before the public over fifty years and all who have used it cheerfully recommend it. If your druggist hasn't it, send his name to Solon Palmer, 374 Pearl Street, New York, and receive free pamphlet testimonials and sample of Lotion, or Lotion Soap.

Her Chief Alarm.

"Goodness gracious," exclaimed the old gentleman, "this disturbance in China is just awful."

"It is so," agreed the old lady. "What with all the natives fighting we're just as likely as not to have a most distressing tea famine this year."—Philadelphia Press.

Exhibits at Paris.

There is a large exhibit from this country at the Paris exposition which will prove very interesting to all who may attend, but no more so than the news that the famous American remedy, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, will positively cure dyspepsia, indigestion, constipation, biliousness and nervousness. To all sufferers of the above complaints a trial is recommended, with the assurance that when honestly used a cure will be effected. It also tones up the entire system.

His Speciality.

SORES and ULCERS DRAIN THE SYSTEM, ENDANGER LIFE.

That old sore or ulcer, which has been a source of pain, worry and anxiety to you for five or ten years—maybe longer—doesn't heal because you are not using the proper treatment, but are trying to cure it with salves and washes. While these are soothing and relieve pain to some extent, no real, permanent good can come from their use, because the disease is in the blood and far beyond the reach of external applications.

A sore heals promptly when the blood is in good condition, but never if it is diseased. The tendency of these old sores and ulcers is to grow worse, spreading and eating deeper into the flesh. They are a constant drain upon the system, gradually but surely ruin the health and sap the very life. A person's capacity for work or pleasure is soon lost in the great desire and search for something to cure.

S. S. S. makes a rapid and permanent cure of old sores and ulcers, and is the only medicine that does, because no other can reach deep-seated blood troubles. Ordinary Sarsaparilla and potash mixtures are too weak and watery to overcome a deadly poison that has taken possession of the blood. Do not waste valuable time experimenting with them.

"Some years ago I was shot in the left leg, receiving what I considered only a slight wound. It developed into a running sore and gave me a great deal of pain. I was treated by many doctors, and took a number of blood remedies, but none did me any good. I had heard S. S. S. highly recommended and concluded to give it a trial. The result was truly gratifying. S. S. S. seemed to get right at the trouble, and forced the poison out of my blood; soon afterwards the sore healed up and was cured sound and well. I now have perfect use of the leg, which was swollen and very stiff for a long time." J. H. McBRAYER, Lawrenceburg, Ky."

S. S. S. is the only purely vegetable blood purifier known; is made of roots and herbs of wonderful purifying properties, which no poison can resist. S. S. S. quickly and effectually clears the blood of all morbid, unhealthy humors, and the old, troublesome sore heals. At the same time the general health is invigorated and built up. When a little scratch or hurt fails to heal readily, you may be sure your blood is bad. S. S. S. will soon put it in order and keep it so.

Our Medical Department is in charge of experienced physicians, who have made blood diseases a life study. If you will write them about your case, they will gladly furnish all information or advice wanted, without any charge whatever. Address SWIFT SPECIFIC CO., ATLANTA, GA.
